Why does integration of adaptation into national budgets matter?

Michael Brossmann, GIZ
15.3.2016, Kingston, Jamaica

Overview

- What is behind the integration of adaptation into development planning and budgeting?
- Why does it matter?
- How to identify entry points for the NAP process?

Objectives of the NAP process

- Reduce vulnerability
- Integrate (= mainstream) climate change adaptation into new and existing development planning processes, within all relevant sectors and levels

UNFCCC, 5/CP.17

Integration of adaptation is at the core of the NAP process!

What does integration mean?

Do things differently because of climate change - wherever necessary

- Systematically identify significant risks and opportunities for development
- Modify affected policies, strategies, plans
- Implement them

Implementation is not possible without adequate financing!

Important to integrate adaptation into development planning and budgeting processes

Why does it matter?

Climate change not only an environmental issue

Address vulnerabilities in different sectors systematically and in the long-term

Climate change is considered an integral part of development planning *and budgeting

- Development-first approach
- Prerequisite for reliable financing

Making national investments climate-resilient

Improving chances to access international climate finance

Focus at TTF

TTF1 (07/2015): High-level political support & sectoral integration in NAP processes

- Understanding integration of adaptation
- Exercise: Integrating adaptation into a planning document
- Spectrum of approaches to initiate integration

TTF2 (03/2016): Financing NAPs: Options for Implementation

- Closer look at the planning and budgeting procedures
- Identifying entry points for the NAP process
